

self-Knowing*

“I don’t know what I need.

I don’t know what ought to be.

I don’t know who or what to blame
(or the cause of anything).

And I don’t know the future.”

Given by Robert Gibson in conversation on May 13, 1976

(This extends outward to be all-inclusive...

“I don’t know what I need” includes not knowing what you, he, she, they or that needs.

“I don’t know what ought to be” for me, him, her, them, situations, or circumstances.

“I don’t know the future,” includes not knowing her, his, theirs, the nation’s, the world’s future, nor the outcome of anything.)

*The small, conditioned self is never capitalized.
